Steve Flores

CEO Hope Christian Health Center

After serving as Hope's first CEO from 2013 to 2015, God called Steve Flores back to Hope Christian Health Center in 2018 to continue leading the organization's mission and growth.

Prior to returning to Hope, Steve operated clinics in Los Angeles' Skid Row, where he directed teams of outreach workers, case managers, and psychiatrists. In this role, he collaborated with Los Angeles County, the California Department of Developmental Services, and the Social Security Administration to connect homeless and underserved individuals with critical services and benefits.

Steve has extensive leadership experience in healthcare operations, having opened and managed a medical clinic as Clinic Administrator and later serving as Director of Clinic Operations for a primary care clinic staffed by 54 employees. Throughout his career, he has also served in community outreach and communications leadership roles, helping organizations strengthen partnerships and expand their impact.

Before entering healthcare leadership, Steve proudly served in the United States Air Force from 1976 to 1982.
